Fund manager's comment

The third quarter of 2024 brought to the real estate market further signs of a recovery in demand and an increase in the volume of transactions. The American central bank, the FED, and its European counterpart further eased monetary policy and lowered key interest rates by another 25 basis points. Markets expect continuation monetary easing and further rate cuts by the ECB also during the last quarter of 2024. These moves provide a slight boost to the real estate market and a gradual improvement in sentiment is seen. This is confirmed by growth in the volume of transactions on the residential and commercial real estate market throughout the Central Europe.

It turns out that the bottom of the real estate cycle is probably behind us. The question remains the speed of further development of the upcoming phases of the real estate cycle which is linked to the economy and business cycle.

In connection with return of employees to offices and the low rate of construction of new office buildings, the occupancy of Bratislava office buildings is gradually increasing. The occupancy rate of office space in Bratislava has been slightly increasing for the third quarter in a row, and in the third quarter it reached a level of approx. 13%. The development of occupancy confirms the stable demand for office space, especially for high-quality modern offices. The average rent for A-class office space grew slightly (3-6% year-on-year) mainly due to limited supply of new offices. Tenants are typically willing to pay a premium for a good location and quality office space.

The Czech retail real estate market is seeing a cautious recovery linked to growth in consumer spending, reflecting sector resilience despite recent economic challenges. Shopping centers saw an increase in foot fall and a slight increase in occupancy, both being good signs of the recovery. Rents for prime space remained stable, with the exception of a slight increase in rents in retail parks.

During the third quarter, IAD IRF focused mainly on renegotiations of expiring leases, management of existing leases and increasing occupancy of the buildings, as well as optimization of the cost structure of individual properties. We have taken over the relations with the financing banks and are actively managing the indebtedness: by end of the third quarter we reduced the LTV (loan to value) by almost 5% (compared to the end of 2023).

Our main goal for the near future remains the active management of real estate projects, especially increasing the occupancy of individual properties.
